

Fifty Shades of Grey - A Husband's View

I have "Tweaked" Original poem by John Summers (2012?) slightly to fit the tune of the Phil Harris 1950 hit - "The Thing" .

2 /4 Time: Intro: [F] [C] [G7] [C]

The [C] missus bought a Paperback, down [F] Shepton, Satur-[C]-day,
I had a look inside her bag; 'twas [D7] "Fifty Shades of [G7] Grey".
Well [C] I just left her to it, and at [F] ten I went to [G7] bed.
An [F] hour later [C] she appeared; the [G7] sight filled me with [C] dread.

In [C] her left hand she held a rope; and [F] in her right a [C] whip!
She threw them down upon the floor, and [D7] then began to [G7] strip.
Well [C] fifty years or so ago; I [F] might have had a [G7] peek;
But [F] Mabel hasn't [C] weathered well; she's [G7] eighty-four next [C] week.

[C] Watching Mabel bump and grind; could [F] not have been much [C] grimmer.
Things then went from bad to worse; she [D7] toppled off her [G7] Zimmer!
She [C] struggled back upon her feet; and in a [F] couple of [G7] ticks,
She [F] put her teeth back [C] in and yelled [G7] "I am a do-min-a-[C]- trix.!!

Now [C] if you knew our Mabel, you'd [F] see just why I [C] spluttered,
I'd spent two months in traction for the [D7] last complaint I'd [G7] uttered.
She [C] stood there nude, naked like; bent [F] forward very [G7] lewd,
I [F] went to hold her [C] sensual like, and [G7] stood on her left [C] boob!

Mabel screamed, her teeth shot out; my [F] god what had I [C] done!?
She moaned and groaned then shouted out: "[D7] Step on the other [G7] one!"
Well [C] readers, I can't tell no more; about [F] what occurred that [G7] day.
[F] Suffice to say [C] my jet black hair, Turned [G7] Fifty Shades of [C] Grey.
